INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

THE book which is here printed for the first time is a quarto manuscript (Ff. 2. 22) in the University Library. It is mentioned in the Oxford Catalogue of 1697 as being in the library of John Moore (then Bishop of Norwich and afterwards Bishop of Ely), which upon his death in 1715 was presented to the University by George the First. It was then in 16th century binding, but unfortunately was soon rebound, by which the difficulty of understanding its structure has perhaps been increased. Nicolson (English Historical Library, ed. 1776, p. 205) gives a superficial and thoroughly misleading account of it; and Ruding's statement that Tyery was one of Henry the Eighth's mint-masters seems to be founded on Nicolson's assertion to that effect.

The volume must have been rearranged more than once in old times, and it is by no means certain that the pieces which it contains admit of being so disposed as to show an intelligible relation between them. But one thing seems clear enough; namely that the bulk of the volume has nothing to do with England or Henry the Eighth, being simply a handbook of the coins lawfully or unlawfully in circulation in France about the year 1526<sup>1</sup>. To this handbook Nicholas Tyery prefixed his address to Henry the Eighth (turning the first quire inside out, so that the English coins might come before the French); and (somewhere in the first quire) he inserted two leaves containing the figures of his proposed Irish coins, which he continued on the blank recto of the following leaf. But it is to be observed that these insertions are apparently by the same hand as the original book. The matter which is printed on pp. 36—40 of the present edition seems to consist of detached notes written in at different times; indeed I am not certain whether leaves 31—34 (pp. 37—40) were not put in afterwards. The two leaves 13 and 30 are one sheet, of which leaf 30, which was probably a blank leaf at the beginning of the book, should come first: they would thus form with leaves 1—4, 7—10 a 10-leaf quire. Leaves 14—21, 22—29 seem certainly to have formed two 8-leaf quires (which had at one time the signatures b and c).

The whole book bears signs of having been left unfinished. Many of the capitals have never been filled in. These and some other insertions are here inclosed in square brackets; and it should be mentioned that the numbering of the coins is also an addition. The pages of the manuscript are indicated by figures in the margin; 10<sup>a</sup>, for instance, meaning the recto of leaf 10, and 10<sup>b</sup> the verso. Contractions have been expanded, the missing letters being printed in italic type; otherwise the spelling of the original has been followed exactly.

The designs for the Irish coins have been reproduced with admirable fidelity by Mr Edwin Wilson<sup>1</sup>. It was impossible, on account of the expense, to include the figures of coins (actually current) given in the Pratique; nor indeed does the same interest attach to them as to the others. But in order to give some idea of the appearance of the original manuscript, circles of about the size of the figures have been inserted in the text.

It has been the Editors' intention merely to make this interesting little fragment of history accessible to numismatists, and not to embark on the larger undertaking of commentary and illustration. A search among the State Papers of the time will supplement the information here contained (see for instance Calendar of State Papers, Nos. 2423, 2595, 2609, &c.). With regard to the title 'defensor fidei,' suggested on page 40, Ruding<sup>1</sup> notes that 'though constantly used in the style of our monarchs from Henry VIII., on whom it was conferred by Pope Leo X. in 1521,' it is not till the reign of George I. that it appears upon the coins of the realm.

*.* The leaves of the manuscript have been numbered by Mr Bradshaw in the order in which they were bound; and as that arrangement has not been followed here, it may be convenient to give the correspondence of that numbering with ours.
